Documentary Highlighting Addiction Recovery Will Be Featured at Bricktown Theater

Providing Answers and Community Resources for Treatment

Oklahoma City, Okla. – The Oklahoma City-County Wellness Now Coalition, INTEGRIS Mental Health, Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, The Addiction Recovery Center, The Green Shoe Foundation, Parents Helping Parents, and Oklahoma Citizen Advocates for Addiction Recovery and Transformation Association are sponsoring a free screening of the documentary “The Anonymous People”. It will be shown Thursday, April 6, 7-9 p.m. at the Harkins Theater in Bricktown.

The purpose is to raise awareness around the epidemic of addiction in the United States. Recovery from addiction is possible, and we need more people to stand up and speak out about addiction.

A brief panel discussion will follow the showing to answer audience questions. Panel members will be professional clinicians as well as people in recovery and parents of those in recovery. The Wellness Now Coalition will have a table of community resources available for attendees with information about local recovery and treatment options.

For more information about the documentary showing, please call Ken Johnson, OCCHD Media Relations Coordinator, at (405) 425-4315.
